The Comedy Edition

As one of the comedy capitals of the world, New York City offers an abundance of comics and daily performances across each of the five boroughs. This week, we invite you to laugh a little (or a lot) with the help of these locally-produced comedy shows.

- Courtyard Comedy at The Three Monkeys

The Three Monkeys pub in Hell's Kitchen has redecorated their outdoor courtyard to host a series of comics and comedienne this fall. Visitors can expect a line-up of talent with credits from HBO, Netflix and Comedy Central. While the event is free to attend, you will need to RSVP in advance and purchase at least two items night of show.

- Ambush Comedy at The Tiny Cupboard

The Tiny Cupboard in Bushwick, Brooklyn is referred to by locals as the tiniest bar in New York City. This fall, the venue repurposed their rooftop space for weekly sunset comedy shows with expanded food and drink service. This Tuesday's show is curated by Ambush comedy with free tickets available here.

- "Baby Shower" Stand-Up at East River Park

"Baby Shower" is one of the most popular outdoor stand-up shows to debut this year. The show takes place every Thursday at the East River Park Amphitheater and reservations are completely free. With few restaurants in the vicinity, the organizers encourage guests to bring their own food and drinks into the amphitheater.

- Best Kept Secret: Take It Outside Comedy

Take it Outside Comedy hosts a variety of socially distanced shows in different locations across Manhattan and Brooklyn. To minimize large crowds, the group requires guests to send a message via Instagram once the date and the lineup are formally announced. Most nights are free to attend and often include a surprise celebrity guest! Click here for a schedule of events.
