Last Call: Oktoberfest

Oktoberfest is typically one of the best opportunities for New York City residents to sample craft brews and traditional German food. This year, we invite you to take in the beautiful fall foliage while supporting local craft breweries before the end of October.

Bierhaus NYC | Midtown

- » As one of the oldest Bavarian-style biergartens in Manhattan, Bierhaus NYC is no stranger to Oktoberfest celebrations. This year, Bierhaus will be open for limited outdoor dining with all the wurst, schnitzel, strudel, and German beer you can muster. Reservations are highly recommended and can be confirmed online here.

Queens Brewery | Ridgewood

- » On Friday, October 23, the founders of Queens Brewery invite you to an evening of live music, brats, and brews to celebrate Oktoberfest 2020. The event will take place in the brewery's expansive outdoor seating area where guests can also enjoy house-made brats, pastrami sandies, giant donuts, and more. #### Black Forest Brooklyn | Fort Greene

- » For something more low-key and traditional, check out Black Forest Brooklyn's Fort Greene location. The restaurant has a huge backyard, a sprawling list of German beers, wine, and traditional treats like sausages, pretzels, and apple strudel. Reservations can be made online here.

Route 66 Steakhouse | Financial District

- » If you're a fan of craft brews and oysters, head over to Route 66 Smokehouse this Saturday and Sunday for Outdoor Oyster Feast 2020. Alongside an extensive list of local and international beers, the weekend special for-two includes a dozen oysters, a main course, and a pair of Guinness glasses or champagne flutes to take home, all for $99! Visitors must purchase tickets in advance here.
