Arts & Culture Edition

After months of being closed, many of the city's finest museums and galleries have reopened, albeit with limited capacity. Whether you're interested in fine art, immersive installations or indie theatre, this edition of Lifestyle includes a collection of new shows and exhibits to keep you busy through the week.

Celebrating 150 Years of The Met

- » Making The Met, 1870–2020 is the centerpiece of The Metropolitan Museum of Art's 150th-anniversary celebration. The exhibition features more than 250 works of art from its founding in 1870 to the present. Timed reservations to view the exhibit must be purchased in advance.

The 24 Hour Plays Presents: Viral Monologues

- » The 24 Hour Plays returns this Saturday with episode 20 of the Viral Monologues series. The program is comprised of mini-dramas that are written, rehearsed, and recorded in 24 hours with TV, film and Broadway stars. Click here for a full schedule of online viewings.

Studio 54 at The Brooklyn Museum

- » Studio 54: Night Magic at The Brooklyn Museum uses photography, fashion, drawings, and film to showcase the radiant history and social impact of New York City's most iconic nightclub. The exhibit runs through November 8 and tickets can be purchased here.

Laser Light Performance at Artechouse NYC

- » Located underneath Chelsea Market, Artechouse recently premiered an immersive digital installation entitled Intangible Forms. Designed by Japanese multimedia artist Shohei Fujimoto, the 30-minute laser performance spans two floors and is unlike any other exhibit or show in New York City. Click here for reservations.
