Women's History Month

March is Women's History Month and we are excited to celebrate the many contributions women have made and continue to make around the world. There are so many ways to honor women this month, and we've collected the very best around town to help you celebrate.

Check Out Talea Brewery

Talea is the first women-owned and operated brewery in New York City. Since opening in 2018, Talea has expanded into its flagship space in Williamsburg, where offerings include a variety of drinks and snacks. Head over to Brooklyn and celebrate the month with a cold brew or a full flight.

Children's Museum of Manhattan

Throughout the month, the Children's Museum of Manhattan will be holding programs highlighting the many contributions women have made to arts and sciences. Some programs focus on Mathematician Dr. Gladys Mae West, whose work led to today's GPS, and Pritzker Prize-winning architect Zaha Hadid.

Women's History Month Pop Up Shop

On March 19, Naturally You!, a women-owned skin and hair care product company, is hosting the "Women's History Month Up Shop" presented by The Black Entrepreneur. While shopping at the event, you can enjoy food by Chef Tay and live music. Register for the free event here.

March Madness: Women's NCAA

Don't miss out on celebrating Women's History Month and March Madness at the same time! This year's Women's NCAA March Madness schedule is out and it's time to plan your viewing parties. Check out these party recipes, like pizza dip, that are perfect for snacking while watching the game.

Women in Superhero Films

Many of the most iconic superhero films are created by women. This list highlights both classics and new additions that were created by women, such as The Matrix directed by trans sisters Lana and Lilly Wachowski, and WandaVision created by Jac Schaeffer. You will definitely want to plan your next movie night after checking out this list.

NYPL Women's History Events

The New York Public Library will be hosting a series of events to honor Women's History Month throughout March. Genres range from "Anime and Manga Club: The Women of Manga" to "Virtual Family Story Time," with both in-person and online events. The events calendar specifies which events are catered to children, teens and adults.

National Women's History Museum

On June 5, the National Women's History Museum will host a live, virtual conversation with Wendy L. Rouse, author of "Public Faces, Secret Lives: A Queer History of the Women's Suffrage Movement." This gives you time to read, or reread, Rouse's work which highlights major contributions from queer suffragists.

Women's History Month: Cass Gallagher

On March 19, take a hike with the Urban Park Rangers beginning at Van Cortlandt Nature Center in the Bronx. The rangers will lead you through the forested Cass Gallagher Nature Trail and on the hike, you'll learn about the woman the trail is named after. There is no better place to learn about someone than in an environment they loved, just be sure to grab a hat.
